Axis Dictators Plan Division of Africa

ROME REPORTS THEY'RE SURE OF OUTCOME

New Points Discussed Today Expected To Affect Course of War

By The Associated Press

ROME Oct 4—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini are so certain of victory they can now begin drafting the great construction lines of their new European and African edifice Virginio Gayda often ill duces editorial spokesman declared today

The new points decided by the Axis leaders at their Brennero meeting today Gayda added are designed to affect deeply the course of the war and the political and economic evolution of the continents into which the war of the Axis more directly cuts '

The editor of Il Giornale D'Italia declared the world may be sure that the two leaders do not move only for formal meetings

"Each of their meetings like each of their decisions is a constructive historic fact of vast importance which surpasses contingencies of the moment,' he said.

Usually well informed sources suggested that relations between the United States and the Rome-Berlin axis occupied Hitler and Mussolini at the Brennero meetings

Plan To Extend War

Also under consideration a high Fascist authority indicated were plans for extension of the war against Britain on all fronts—including Egypt

At the same time the Italian press stressed the possibility of a long war and declared Germany and Italy were bringing their production facilities to the peak of efficiency determined to fight Britain to a finish regardless of the length of time required to assure victory

The conference between axis partners who met in the same Alpine setting last March 18 to coordinate their plans for reshaping Europe took place in an armored train on the Italian side of the frontier

Anti aircraft guns formed a guard around the meeting place

Present were the Italian and German foreign ministers Count Galeazzo Ciano and Joachim Von Ribbentrop and a retinue of military and political aids

Peace Not Discussed

Without actually disclosing the topics under discussion a well-informed Italian source said the talks did not concern Soviet Russia Spain or a peace move In reply to a direct question he said it was possible the leaders were discussing the relations of the Axis toward the United States in line with the whole war perspective

Officials did not deny reports the Ciano and Von Ribbentrop might confer with Russian Premier Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff after the Brenner meeting but said that nothing was known of this possibility in Rome

Mussolini's train arrived at Brennero about 10 a m (3 a m Washington time) Two hours after that in which Count Ciano left Rome with the German ambassador Hans George Viktor Von Mackensen Stefani official Italian news agency said the meeting was arranged suddenly

Pupils' Gifts Totaling $393 Put Iron Lung Drive Over Top

Purchase of Additional Equipment Seen Possible as Donations Pass $1,350 Goal.

Marion's public school pupils and teachers Thursday gave $393 74 to the fund to purchase an iron lung for Marion City hospital and assured the placing of the order for the respirator

This sum greeted as 'marvelous' by Miss Lillian McCarthy who started the move to buy the respirator, together with the contribution of St Mary Parochial school children and the money from collections taken in the county schools are credited by Miss McCarthy with having shoved the fund beyond the goal

County Schools Help

To date $98 32 has been received from the county schools. The report is incomplete several of the largest schools in the county having asked to wait until later to make their returns Monday the Catholic school children gave $50

It is possible she said that in addition to the iron lung of the type used by Fred Snite Jr of Chicago there may be enough money to buy an iron lung especially for infants and small children The large device will cost $1 350 and the smaller respirator is listed at $645 However purchase of the second respirator will depend upon later returns

Pops Corn To Earn Gift

'There just aren't enough nice things to say about the way the boys and girls all over the city and county have responded to the appeal" Miss McCarthy said

One small boy in Marion augmented the sum given him by his mother by taking orders for popcorn at five cents a sack His mother popped the corn and he delivered it turning over his earnings to the fund

Among the many contributions was a sum this morning from a former teacher of Miss McCarthy who now lives in Dayton

Draft Boards Completed; Registration Plans Set

27 Names To Go to Governor; Election Board Maps Work; Marion County Man on District Appeals Board.

Preparations for the military draft in Marion county moved forward on three fronts today

1 The three-man recommending committee completed its 27 nominations for men who will serve as draft officials and expected to forward the names to Gov Bricker today

2 The county board of elections announced after a special meeting last night that all 57 precincts in the county will be open Oct. 16 from 7 a m to 9 p m to register Marion county men between 21 and 35, inclusive for the draft Six regular election workers were assigned for each precinct, to serve without pay

3 Announcement was made at Lima of appointment of a five-man draft appeals board to serve in the Third judicial district, which includes Marion county Among members nominated was Cyril T Guthery of LaRue representing agriculture

Completion of the nominations of the county recommending committee which includes Common Pleas Judge Hector S Young as chairman and Probate Judge Oscar Gast and James C Woods, The Star business manager, as members, came last night after none of the nominees appeared to request exemption from service as draft officials The committee had announced it would meet at the common pleas courtroom to hear such requests

Announcement Soon

Official forms were being filled out and were scheduled to be sent to Gov Bricker today Names of nominees will not be announced until approved by Gov Bricker and President Roosevelt. The 27 nominees will serve as members of draft boards, registrants advisory boards and as appeals agents in Marion county Approval of the nominations is expected Monday

The board of elections meeting in special session called by Dr C J Altmaier, chairman approved a list of 342 precinct election officials who will serve not only in the draft registration Oct 16 but also for the next year in various elections

The board is asking all six workers in each precinct to be on duty on draft registration day An official said the board hesitated to pick out two or three from each precinct board to serve as registrars—out of the fear that someone would feel slighted at not being picked or that someone would not like being picked out of the six

The fact that six workers are assigned to duty will not make it necessary for all six to be working at the same time, thus making the job easier, officials explained

To Get Certificates

The precinct workers will receive their certificates of appointment early next week, along with letters explaining their duties in draft registration

The election board has called a meeting of the precinct workers for 8 p m. on Monday, Oct. 14, at the common pleas courtroom. At that time they will be given full instructions and various blanks and supplies needed for handing the registration two days later

"There is no pay provided for this service but we feel that we should do this as a patriotic duty

BRITISH SAY 9 SUBS SUNK

Success Against Undersea Craft Reported as London Battle Goes On.

By The Associated Press

LONDON Oct. 4 — As if to even war scores after Britain announced destruction of nine axis submarines and a destroyer, German planes in relays thundered up the Thames against London this afternoon and blasted viciously at a southeast coast town

British sources said that the pounding of the unidentified southeast coast town—in an area long regarded as the likeliest place for an attempted German landing — was the worst it had experienced

Earlier, in the same region, German coastal guns on the French shore picked a British convoy out of the murky dawn on the Strait of Dover and raked the ships with booming salvoes

It was not disclosed in London whether the Germans scored any hits but it was said that the convoy, tugging its own anti-aircraft balloon barrage, steamed on around the coast.

The roar of attackers coming up the Thames estuary signaled the Nazis' return to the battle of London after the quietest night of the 27 since the air siege of the capital began

First Alarm Signalled

Single German planes flying in relays up the Thames estuary toward London this afternoon caused the first air alarm since dawn

A machine-gun burst heard above the roar of the engines indicated that British fighter planes were in action Afterward, gunfire was heard over the central London area

During the morning a lone raider—a gigantic four-engined plane—dived from clouds over the Thames estuary and dropped 10 high explosive bombs They were said to have fallen on marshland but it was acknowledged that nine persons were injured, two seriously

Although hampered by bad weather, the air ministry said British bombers had made night raids on shipping off Dunkerque and in Rotterdam harbor, on barge concentrations at Heusden, an industrial plant near Wesel and railroad and oil storage fa-

WILLKIE CALLS FOR RETURN OF U. S. UNITY

Declares Ill Feeling, Deliberately Fostered, Checks Economic Recovery.

By The Associated Press

ABOARD WILLKIE TRAIN ENROUTE TO PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4—Wendell L Willkie told a sun-splashed audience at Harrisburg, Pa, today that elimination of class distinctions which he declared the New Deal had fostered would help improve economic conditions in the United States

'I call America back to unity,' said the Republican presidential nominee, asserting that unity would enable development of a strong national defense and revitalization of industry

'The disunion that has been preached in the last seven years is one of the basic causes of our economic depression today,' Willkie said

'It is simple to end class warfare in the United States and bring cooperation and send the men back to work in the factories and the mills and then the 8 600,000 unemployed will disappear

"If we continue to go down the present road of economic depression, of disunity, we will go down the road to war because dictators only strike when they think we are weak and we will be weak '

Crowd Lines Street

Escorted by a squadron of Harrisburg patrolmen in dress uniform, Willkie drove to the capitol amidst shouts and cheers from the crowd that followed his car Riding with the candidate and Mrs Willkie were Gov Arthur H James of Pennsylvania and his daughter, Dorothy

A rally at Pittsburgh last night, where the presidential nominee urged a change in administering the Wagner labor act was the first time that he and Sen Charles L McNary of Oregon his running mate had spoken from the same platform

Willkie upholding the principle of collective bargaining in a speech devoted solely to labor problems described administration of the Wagner act as "one of the most shocking tragedies in the history of American industrial relations."

"The troubles lie, in the main," he said 'not with the act, but with its administration

Changes Would Be Wise

'It would therefore seem to me wise, before materially changing the act, as many suggest, to change the administration of it. This would require some special

legislation but that problem is not insuperable

'If a wiser administration of the act does not produce the results that we all want—good relations between labor and industry—then changes in the act would be in order

Introduced by McNary as a "fearless, straight-thinking, competent America," Willkie received a rising ovation from the crowd

With the two candidates on the platform in the infield was Republican Chairman Joseph W. Martin Jr, who declared that in the November election the "victory will not be a Republican victory —it will be an American victory"

Election Office Busy As Voters Rush To Beat Deadline for Registering

The board of elections office is rapidly becoming a miniature madhouse, with registrations coming in so rapidly that officials predict their files will be bigger than in 1936

In 1936 somewhere between 17,000 and 18,000 Marionites were registered and helped bring about an all-time high vote of more than 20,000 in the county as a whole

As far as the size of the vote this November, officials are reluctant to predict this early.

Monday Deadline

Total registrations since the May primary stood at 1,480 and residence transfers at 705 at the opening of business today Deadline for registering and transferring falls at 9 p m Monday.

To handle the increasing number of people seeking to register, the board now has six persons working, most of them at a series of tables stretching three-fourths of the length of the office In a rear room a corps of party workers check over poll lists and at the battery of registration files even more party workers leaf through thousands of names to see who is and who isn't eligible to vote

Party Workers Busy

The parties are apparently driving hard to line up all the possible votes they can muster, observers said. An unregistered Democrat or Republican, does no good when election time comes.

The board's office, located on East Center street above the Marion Federal Savings & Loan association, will be open to 9 p m tonight and from 8:30 a m to 9 p. m. Saturday and Monday.

THE ROAD TO SHANI LUN

by Rita Mohler Hanson

YESTERDAY: What began for Lynn Britton as a journey lightly undertaken to visit a Mongolian prince has become a prison trip into the Chinese interior. Now her captor, handsome Temu Darin, is pressing luxurious Chinese garments on her; she is helpless, because her half-brother, Dick Britton, has apparently deserted her.

CHAPTER EIGHT
Attempted Escape

"HOW gorgeous!" Lynn gasped, and held the ring close the better to admire its beauty. She pressed the pearls to her cheek, felt their soft sheen and then gazed at them again enchanted.

"It is too large," Temu said, removing the circlet. "We'll have it cut down." Lynn could not bear to see that ring leave her sight.

"Perhaps it would fit the middle finger," she suggested.

He shook his head, "That would place it imperfectly."

"I'd really like to own that ring," she persisted. "I'd like to buy it."

He shot her a quick, compelling look that for some reason made her feel abashed as if she had been guilty of some breach of manners or lacking in a sensitivity and intuition she should possess.

"Some rings are never for sale," he replied quietly.

"I understand," she agreed ruefully. She hadn't know it was in her to feel such a passion for an object. For a moment she had forgotten her surroundings, her plight.

"How did you acquire the ring?" she asked.

"I neither bought it nor stole it," he smiled, returning the ring to his pocket. "You'll want some of these hair ornaments," he went on, and laid aside one of pink jade representing the lotus and another of peony design in blue tourmaline.

"My short hair wouldn't hold those things," she informed him coldly.

"I imagine it grows swiftly," he remarked, and calmly laid aside several necklaces of Mongol workmanship "You have beautiful hair."

Though she had brought up the personality his continuation of it made her angry. With an effort she held back a contemptuous remark. Finally he picked out a pair of tiny, jewelled tobacco pipes. He was so arrogantly sure of himself that Lynn could not help being impressed by it. Being the friend of a prince seemed to have its compensation, she mused.

"Where," she asked curiously, "do you think I would ever wear these strange things?"

"There will be times when you are with the Princess Mother and pleased to wear Chinese garb. She belongs to the China of the old days." He told the men to leave and called his own boys to bring chests of cedar and sandalwood in which to pack the garments for the journey. He walked to the kang where her steamer trunks and traveling bags lay.

"Now as to your clothing for the trip," he said. "We travel light. A laundryman washes our garments every evening. Take only two or three changes of underclothing—sturdy shirts and shorts and heavy stockings. A dress or so for the evenings. The Duchess has Mongo cloaks and trousers prepared for you."

Her light silk pajamas lay across the pillow.

"Another thing," he added. "You must have heavy, warm garments for sleeping in the desert."

"But I haven't," she retorted.

"I'll see that you are supplied. The rest of your possessions will be packed away until we reach Delun." He turned, went out, and closed the door behind him.

Open Door

Lynn sat down and stared unseeing at the maid who was busy with the packing. What now? What did they want with her in Delun that she should take her against her will? Was it a sample of Oriental cruelty and vindictiveness?

Temu had said, "The Prince will not hold your brother's crimes against you." Lynn did not feel confident that this was true. Somehow, she must escape!

A servant came in and eased himself out with a chest of garments on his shoulder. The door did not latch behind him. The massive red gate beyond the devil-screen had stood open all morning, Lynn, knew, to admit strings of coolies delivering merchandise. The maid's back was turned.

Lynn walked coldly and quietly out of the room, across the courtyard, and into the street. She might happen upon a white person, or someone speaking English, who would heed her plea and take her to an American consular agent or some source that would give her aid and protection.

She had barely gone a few paces into the street when Chan, the head servant, darted in front of her and began chattering and waving his arms, urging her back. Looking around, she saw Temu standing at the gate and watching, the shadow of a smile about his mouth.

Of the few passersby, staring at her vacantly, not one seemed worth appealing to. She tried to dodge around the boy barring her way. He was big for a coolie, or being the athletic girl she was, she might have struck him down.

Temu sauntered over, motioned the servant back into the compound, and asked Lynn if she didn't prefer walking back to being taken by force. She walked beside him and managed to drop her handkerchief, a distinctive hand-made piece of linen. She turned and saw a beggar snatch it up.

"Where is Sherdock?" she demanded. "I wish to see him."

"Sherdock left for our next camp last night." Temu escorted her to the orange door. "We shall be ready to depart in a few minutes."

She stepped inside and turned and looked at him. "Since I must go, why couldn't I have gone with Sherdock?"

He measured her with eyes that missed nothing, a faint smile on his lips. "Sherdock might be physically helpless if a tall, strong girl such as you are, made up her mind to leave."

"Did he go alone?"

He spoke crisply. "No, but I do not want the servants forced to lay hands on you."

His words generated an emotion in Lynn out of all proportion to his apparent intention. Blood rushed to her face. She hadn't believed herself capable of such a passion of fear-whipped hate and some other indefinable emotion that welled up in her. She lifted her hands, and could have struck him.

Temu Darin stared. Then suddenly understanding her rage, he spoke stiffly. "I have no evil intentions towards you." He wheeled and left her.

Lynn closed the door, turned, and sank down in a chair. She was trembling like a spent child, ashamed of her emotion and lack of control with a shame intensified by his final words. Somehow her pride, something virginal and exclusive, had been hurt.

One More Clue

Presently she noticed that all her possessions except one bag had been taken away. The maid had disappeared. Lynn rose and bathed her face, powdered her nose and ran a comb through her hair. She put on her wraps for the journey. There was no use being refractory when it did not advance her cause. Finally, she took paper and envelope from her bag and wrote in a firm hand:

Please rescue me. I am being taken to Delun against my will by men who claim to be representatives of the Prince of Shani Lun.

She signed her name and sealed the note in an envelope addressed to "Any Chinese or American Government Agent." This she inclosed in a larger envelope with a reasonable sum of money and placed it inside her purse.

A boy appeared for her bag. Following him out, she came face to face with Temu Darin carrying a traveling basket that contained a white Persian kitten, blinking big, green eyes at the world.

Lynn took the appealing little thing in her hands.

"A gift from the Prince," said Temu boming.

Firmly Lynn returned the animal to its basket.

"I want no gifts from the Prince."

"My mistake," he said gravely. "Though born in the Prince's domain, the kitten comes with the compliments of its mother, a lady from Parthia. She has three others and would be pleased for you to accept this one."

"That is different," said Lynn picking up the kitten again and settling it on her arm. "I have no quarrel with cats."

He smiled and watched her face obliquely as he directed her throuh several courtyards to an inconspicuous side gate where a motor-car awaited them in an h'utung barely wide enough to accommodate the machine.

Lynn gasped, stopped and stared.

The car bristled like a man-o'-war. It was a large limousine filled with machine gun emplacements on the front fenders. Strapped to the running boards stood gunners in heavy sheepskin garments. Beside a native driver sat the mechanic, a small sunburned white man who looked as if he might be French.

A white man! Lynn's heart lifted. But he stared straight ahead and did not once glance at her.

"We're being quiet as possible about this expedition," said Temu. "I'm taking valuable cargo through a bandit-infested region."

They walked around to enter the car from the farther side. Then Lynn saw the driver. He was a burly Mongol, minus one ear, his face deeply pitted with smallpox scars. But today, instead of a red pilgrim's robe, he wore a khaki uniform and sat hunched over the wheel busily plying a pair of knitting needles in a pile of rare white camel's-hair yarn.

Lynn closed her eyes and opened them again. She had seen aright. The very pilgrim who had so terified her in the temple park was busily knitting a little white garment.

At sight of Lynn he stuffed the work into his his tunic, jumped from the car and flung himself at her feet, beating his head in the dust and chanting strange musical words.

YOUR HEALTH

Vitamin Overdosage

Vitamins, are the fertilizers of the human body. We need only small amounts of them and they act subtly to influence our well being, our growth, our hardiness (resistance to infections) just as fertilizers affect the same general features of plants.

The question arises—and a very natural one it is in view of the prevalent craze to get all sorts of extra vitamins in concentrated form and otherwise—whether we can get too much vitamins. Plants get too much fertilizer sometimes. Can we overdo the vitamin business.

Most of what we hear is just the opposite kind of advice—here is Surgeon-General Parran, of the Public Health Service, telling us that there is a "new starvation" in the United States that hits two out of five citizens, resulting in faulty nutrition. "More than 40 per cent of the people in the country are not getting a diet adequate to maintain good health and vigor," writes Dr. Parran.

I gave reasons in the first article this week for believing that this sort of talk is grossly exaggerated. Physicians who see patients in charity clinics are familiar with conditions in all walks of life—particularly those walks of life where food is not abundant—and yet they find that deficiency diseases are still rare.

But people are undoubtedly taking vitamin products in large quantities. So the question is pertinent—does this do any harm?

Experiments have been carried out to determine this, and the result of them seems to be that there is no ground to fear that except in one instance, any ill effects come from overdosage.

OHIO INVENTOR'S NEW BOMB

Inventor James N. Ice of Martins Ferry, O., is showing U. S. army officials a new type of aerial bomb, which, he claims, would kill 1,000 goats in test if a direct hit were scored. The device, 10 times larger than the model above, would fire 500 machine gun bullets simultaneously three to four feet from the ground, from rifle barrels, as shown, so that no living creature within striking distance could escape. In destroying itself, the bomb would throw out 5,000 feet of coiled wire, attached to iron slugs, designed to rip apart anything with which it came in contact.

Certified Seed Producers of Area Listed

Marion and nearby counties again this year rank high in the state's roster of certified seed producers, according to the annual directory of the Ohio Seed Improvement association received recently by County Agricultural Agent Homer S. Porteus.

The district produces substantial amounts of tested seed for hybrid corn, oats, barley, soybeans and Thorne wheat. The list of growers was compiled by the seed improvement association, legally designated agency for inspection and certification of seed growers in Ohio under rules and regulations approved by various state officials.

Strict Tests

All growers must pass strict tests before their seed is certified by the association. All the lots listed below have not yet been certified.

Jean W. Lambert of Columbus, inspector for the association, inspected the soybean fields of Homer Kile and Melvin Kennedy near Martel recently. He checked for varietal mixture, other crops, diseases and noxious weeds. Later seed samples will be given laboratory tests. Kile & Kennedy have 10 acres of Mandarin beans, 8 Kingwa, 6 Richland and 14 Mingo, all grown for seed.

The complete list of growers by counties, as reported by the association, follows:

1,800 Mountain Youths Find Chance for Education at Kentucky College

By The Associated Press

BEREA, Ky., Oct. 3—A chance for a year of college again is afforded 1,800 boys and girls from remote mountain sections of eight southern states at Berea college this winter for the average cost of $150 a student.

Few, if any, of these young people could hope to attend college elsewhere because of the extremely low finances of most of their families. But at Berea they are required to work and in many instances earn the entire cost of their year's schooling.

Berea, which is starting its eighty-sixth term, is located just out of the famous bluegrass section of Kentucky in the foothills of the Cumberland mountains. The campus takes up about 140 acres, over 400 acres are used for instruction in gardening and farming; there are over 70 buildings of classrooms, dormitories and college industry.

Even Teach A B C's

A student must be at least 15. He may start with his A B C's; there are classes for ungraded student as well as secondary and college courses.

The college offers degrees of bachelor of arts and bachelor of science in agriculture or home economics. In the secondary schools there is a wide choice of vocational and industrial subjects.

The student pays no tuition, and expenses for a school term of nine months, including a furnished dormitory room with electric light, steam heat, board and incidentials is around $150.

Each dormitory student is required to work an average of two hours a day in one of the college industries or in some branch of their institution. For this they receive money credits applicable to their school bills.

Many Branches of Work

The students operate the school's heat and power plant, laundry, hospital, bakery, poultry farm, dairy, creamery, garden and a modern hotel.

At the head of this unique mountain institution is Dr. Francis S. Hutchins who last fall succeeded his father, Dr. William J. Hutchins as president. His brother is Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago.

Berea gets no state or religious financial aid; its funds are solicited from interested friends throughout the nation.

There are no fraternities, sororities or high-power athletics. Berea has no football team, but usually turns out a fine basketball team and is a member of the Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic association.

GUESTS AT MARSEILLES

Guests at the Harley Kennedy home at Marseilles Sunday included Mr. and Mrs. Willis Co- lumber and children, Robert and Jeanne, and Dale Pfeiffer of Kenton, Mr. and Mrs. N. nedy and sons, Gerald and M of LaRue, Mr. and Mrs. F. Kennedy and daughter, S. Lee of Marion, Dr. and Mrs. Wendell and Professor and Burley of Monroe, Mich.

Kiwanis Hear O. S. U. Line Coach, See Movies of Game with Michigan

Ernie Godfrey Praises Jack Stephenson's Play at Ohio State.

ERNIE GODFREY

"Football," America's favorite autumn pastime, was the subject of a talk by Ernie Godfrey, Ohio State university line coach, when he made his annual visit here Thursday as a guest at the Kiwanis club luncheon.

Coach Godfrey, introduced by Dr. C. B. Cehrs, program chairman, talked of the sport in general terms, of Ohio State's grid past and future and heaped praise on Jack Stephenson, Marion's member of the "battling Buckeyes," by terming him a "youth who succeeded because he believed in himself."

He showed motion pictures of last year's Ohio State-Michigan game, which the "Bucks" lost 21-14 after leading 14-0 at halftime.

The coach expressed his appreciation for the annual invitation to visit Marion and remarked that he "always looks forward with pleasure to meeting with the Kiwanians." He apologized that he could not present pictures of a more recent game but explained that Western conference officials now have a "gentleman's agreement" not to release grid game cinemas until the following season.

Praises Marionite

"I'm very proud of Jack Stephenson," he said, "and if we were as well fortified at every position as we are at tackle with Stephenson, Maag and Piccini, we could play two major games every week. Stephenson," he reminded his audience," was an outstanding high school player, but he made good because he believed in himself and was willing to sacrifice to become a successful football player."

He stressed the importance motion pictures have attained in building great teams. In former days coaches studied for years to prepare an adequate defense for certain plays used by their opponents, while now the pictures solve the "mystery" of any play within a few minutes. Ohio State's coaching staff, as well as those of all other schools make a year-around study of the pictures to build their attacks and defensive measures.

Ohio State this season, in Godfrey's opinion, is giving the public the "most spectacular schedule ever played." Last week's game wasn't an easy one but victory was anticipated, while this week's contest may be entirely different and, "I'm afraid of Purdue," was Godfrey's estimate of Saturday's foe. "They will bring with them the four fastest backs of any team . . . there's no substitute for speed and I wouldn't be surprised if we came out on the short end of the score," were other of his comments on Purdue.

Play Very Little

His audience was surprised to hear his report of a study which revealed that actual playing time of a game was only 11 minutes, 45 seconds. He said that three minutes and six seconds of this was used in making tackles, five minutes and 24 seconds in scrimmage and that the ball was in the air the remaining three minutes and 15 seconds.

Charging that "unscrambling is the real thief of the game," he explained that the major share of the time is used in getting ready for the succeeding play after a pile-up. Huddles take about 19 minutes, 29 seconds, in an average game and a team utilizing this method of starting plays, can run only about 43 in the course of a game. Teams starting plays without huddles can run 87 indicating the probability, he said, that the huddle should be eliminated.

Convention Plans

Cutler A. McGrew, president, announced that the club will send representatives to the state convention in Akron, Oct. 9-12. He reported the delegates are Harry L. Dowler, Harold J. Grigsby and J. Douglas Torrance, with alternates, Dr. J. F. Smyth, Dr. Frederick W. Rea and Jay Newell.

Two new members, D. K. Morgan, manager of the Firestone service store, and A. T. Allen, visiting teacher of the Marion schools, were introduced by A. W. Kette. Guests were Carl Dauler of Bellefontaine, A. W. Collins of Berea, Oliver E. Hamilton, Raymond Kimberly, Jack Danner, Dr. O. G. Stephenson, Harold Cook and John Dowler, all of Marion.

CAPSULES FOR DRAFT LOTTERY

This is the type of capsules to be used at the national draft lottery in Washington in selecting the young men to be called up for one year's military training. It is a sample. The number 258 was the first drawn in 1917 by the late Secretary of War Newton D. Baker. Numbers will be printed on white cardboard and inserted inside the capsules.

LIMA MAN QUESTIONED IN KENTON WOMAN'S DEATH

Special to The Star

KENTON, Oct. 4—As funeral services were held in Kenton today for Miss Dorotha LeVone LeHew, 31, native of this city who died of a fractured skull Tuesday evening in a Lima hospital, Lima police continued their questioning of Lloyd (Red) Dacklin, 54, Lima bartender who admitted he was with the woman when she fell or leaped from a railroad overhead in South Lima.

Dacklin allegedly told police that he and Miss LeHew quarreled and that she leaped from the overhead to railroad tracks 20 feet below. Death was due to a cerebral hemorrhage as result of a head injury. She is survived by her mother, who lives in Tiro, and her father, J. Glen LeHew of Findlay.

Hoodlumism

THE MIDWEST is heartily ashamed of the hoodlumism displayed recently in several places.

In closing days of the dramatic pennant race between Cleveland and Detroit there were outbreaks in both cities and a more serious and more shameful display came during Wendell Willkie's trip into Michigan.

That perverted spirit of partisanship which expressed itself by booing public speakers and throwing things at a rival team is an insult to the sportsmanship which should mark every kind of a contest.

The world admires a man or woman or high school student loyal in support of his favorite but there is no loyalty in the disgraceful exhibitions which have been seen in the past two weeks and they hurt the cause they espouse so foolishly.

After the shameful "ladies day" performance in Cleveland, Ohioans were less disappointed when the Tigers won the game and the pennant. In the same way the acts of hoodlums during Mr. Willkie's Michigan visit bring to him a measure of support from those Americans who favor decent sportsmanship.

Teamwork That Will Win

WE hear and read much these days about the need of guiding youth in the right direction and especially toward preservation of the principles and institutions essential to our democracy. We are in agreement with all this but now and then get the idea that in some instances, at least, youth may be several steps ahead of those who advocate such guidance.

For example, evangelistic services have been started at Trinity Baptist church under auspices of young people of the congregation and we regard this as decidedly noteworthy and significant, since it is evidence of interest and activity in support of religion, the greatest and most beneficent of all human welfare agencies. And it is especially interesting to hear that the meetings and services are interdenominational, indicating that youth is not inclined to erect obstacles in the path of a common cause and purpose by placing emphasis on comparatively minor differences in doctrine. The door is open to all who are aiming at the one important goal.

Of course the program is in full accord with the views and wishes of the pastor and older members of the church, and doubtless they have had an important part in the planning, but this by no means detracts from the credit due the young people.

Other youth groups here and elsewhere are active in fields of service vital to the interests of community, state and nation. In virtually every instance the young people provide proof that they are not only working for better conditions in these times, but are also looking ahead and building for future human happiness and security.

There are other youth organizations centering thought and effort on principles and programs not so praiseworthy. Some for instance, tend toward communism and other radical doctrines. But for that matter, some of the adult population are similarly occupied, so the situation is about the same regardless of age classifications.

It is true that in both categories—the good and the evil—youth's course is most likely to depend upon the example set by the oldsters. But then again, we often find evidence that the attitude of tolerance, generosity and fair play characteristic of right-minded young people may well provide an object lesson for elders who may have lost all or part of these fine human qualities in the long trail of years.

It is all indicative of the benefits to be gained by young and old through mutual understanding and association in efforts to preserve the highest standards of life and to extend those conditions to the greatest possible number of people.

With such teamwork functioning throughout the land, American democracy will have one of its strongest guarantees of security.

Freedom's Voice

THIS NATION is one of the few on the face of the earth in which a free people may freely express its voice in determining by whom and in what manner it shall be governed. In one land after another the voice of a dictator has replaced the voice of the people in government but here democracy still lives.

The ballot has become the sacred right of Americans and there is wholesome indication that they are awakening to the privilege with which it endows them and the responsibility it brings for many things indicate that more Americans than ever before will vote at the November election.

Ohio electors have until Oct. 7 to register and election boards report an unprecedented number enrolling and predict that the election will set an all time high in votes cast.

No more serious duty ever confronts the electorate than the choice of the men who guide the nation's destiny. One who fails to act upon so serious an obligation is so remiss in his duty that he falls short of the qualifications which measure a good American.

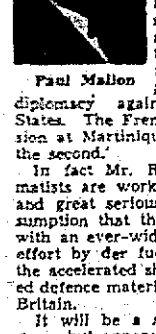
News Behind the News

Martinique Expansion Seen as Possible Nazi Diplomatic Thrust at U. S.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 — Mr. Roosevelt turned off lightly but definitely the French official story that the expansion of its naval base in Martinique was just one of those things the Vichy government had contemplated long before the war and was just getting around to.

The new Vichy ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, had not been out of the White House more than a few hours with this explanation before the President spoke forcefully his opposition to the contemplated expansion.



Paul Mallon

Behind the counter exchange of deft diplomatic thrusts is the conviction that the Japanese signing with the axis was only the first step in a Hitler campaign of threat diplomacy against the United States. The French naval expansion at Martinique could well be the second.

In fact Mr. Roosevelt's diplomatists are working with silence and great seriousness on the assumption that they will be faced with an ever-widening diplomatic effort by der fuehrer to prevent the accelerated shipment of needed defence materials to his enemy, Britain.

It will be a shadowy indirect game but apparently will not induce any change in the established line of administration action.

Draft Administrator

Mr. Roosevelt held up appointment of draft control administrator, because he has been reaching high. A persuasive sound out effort was made several days ago by the White House to get Robert Maynard Hutchins, the president of Chicago university. His reputation as a strict but fair-minded scholastic executive was apparently what the President wanted in preference to the military authorities who are thoroughly familiar with the mechanics of the draft, and who will do the work anyway.

Mellett Change

The President's designation of Lowell Mellett to his official secretarial family was not necessarily a recognition of the newcomer's exceptional success with coordinated publicity during the campaign, although a promotion was due. The change will not involve any increase in salary above the $10,000 which Mellett has received as head of the office of government reports. But Mellett's expanding activities personally for the President had apparently conflicted with a non-political attitude being maintained by that department. The switch was engineered to give him a freer hand.

Mellett, who has been the Michaelson for the President in the present campaign, will assume complete publicity coordination control in event of emergency. The groundwork has already been laid for it.

Embargo

Suggestions that domestic or international politics inspired the three weeks delay in effectiveness of the embargo against Japanese scrap iron do not appear justified by the facts. The effective date of Oct. 15 was chosen apparently as the fairest possible concession to American scrap iron exporters. They can clear before that date about half the orders they had on hand when the embargo was announced. The other half will be scrapped.

Draft Costs

A confidential suggestion that the administration is planning a series of allowances for families of draftees that may run the draft cost into unexpected millions has been dropped to senate and house tax leaders. Only the bare outline of the plan was dropped, but this indicated an extra allowance of $15 a month might be given by the government to the wife of any draftee who chose to allot half his own pay. The effect would be to raise the ultimate allowance of draftees to $45. A similar arrangement to pay mechanical experts extra allowances for their services was also mentioned.

Congressional leaders nearly fainted at the prospect of the cost, until the treasury men suggested it would be postponed until next session.

Can Your Son Read?

By Booth Mooney in the Texas Weekly.

SUPPOSE you have a son in high school. Can he read?

The question is propounded in all seriousness. Can that high school son of yours read a book in such a way as to gain a clear notion of its contents? Has the costly educational machine taught him how to absorb ideas from the printed page? Teaching that youth how to do this is one of the basic functions of the educational machine.

If your son can read competently, you have a right to conclude he is an above-the-average boy, or that he has the good fortune to be attending an above-the-average school. For thousands of American high school students, according to the American Council on Education, "are still only at the fourth or fifth grade in reading ability." This is the considered view of some of the nation's leading educators, reached after a four-year study of American educational methods.

TROUBLE is two-fold: the wrong kind of books and the wrong kind of teaching methods. There exists, according to the American Council on Education, an urgent necessity for "radical changes" in high school curricula. Unanimously agreed on the need for revision of instructing technique, a council committee of 10 nationally known educators said in a recent statement that it is the duty of America's high schools to provide "practical and realistic" instruction in "higher forms of reading and interpretation." Secondary schools, they said, have long been mistaken in "assuming that pupils are not in need of post-elementary instruction in reading."

As for books used in public schools, the educators said: "One reason why pupils are unable to read well is that much of the material which is presented in textbooks is altogether inappropriate for the cultivation of reading habits. When the history of the United States, for example, is condensed into a book of 500 or 600 pages, it has to be compressed to such an extent that the anecdotes which would make it a lively, interesting subject are almost, if not entirely, left out.

Added to this, the educators said, is the fact that in recitations teachers "show ingenuity in torturing the subject" by asking questions by which a student gains knowledge of only "the most deliberate and minute dissection of what he has read." And: "The result is that whenever a pupil takes up a book he begins to ramble in his thinking, indulging in all kinds of speculation as to the possible questions that one might raise. Pupils begin to think that it requires from three to six months to read through a book."

THIS constitutes a severe indictment of the manner in which the school system in performing—or, rather, failing to perform—one of its fundamental functions. Yet, let it be emphasized, this indictment was not drawn by "enemies of education." Instead, it represents the finding of a group of school men—university professors, high school superintendents, high school principals, education, administrators who for four years have been studying American educational methods in an effort to work out a comprehensive educational program.

What is the remedy? Is it to be found in the expenditure of more money? Are the schools too poor financially to be able to teach students how to read? That is not the idea of the committee of the American Council on Education. Members of this committee imply that less, not more, money could be spent to good effect so far as this particular problem is concerned.

To remedy slovenly reading habits, the educators making up the committee call for "stimulation, encouragment, and instruction" by experienced teachers. Widespread use of library facilities—free reading, guidance as to selection of material, familiarity with card cataloguing systems—"would result in economies and cultivation of powers of inestimable value to the individual pupil." This recommendation indicates that incomplete use is being made of existing facilities. Students do not use these facilities because, literally, they do not know how to use them, and they ought to be taught how to use them, of course.

STUDENTS should learn how, says this group of educators, to distinguish between different types of reading materials; how to look through a reference book for a single desired fact; how to be critical of testimony presented by the biased writer; how to supplement information on a statement not fully understood by further inquiry and by reading other sources of information. It is almost unbelievable that high school students are not already being taught these things. But they are not being taught them, according to the testimony of those school men. Despite the pouring of manifold millions of dollars into the public school systems, thousands of high school students are unable to read well enough to derive pleasure or profit from reading. They are not, that is, even learning how to learn.

Reading is, to many of us, an end in itself. But it is more than that. Under proper methods of teaching the art of reading, the council committee points out, much more would be accomplished than merely training good readers." Indeed, "No other contribution to general education can be of importance equal to that which would be gained by making pupils competent readers." In other words, reading still, as in the past, maketh a full man. And it seems that our schools are turning out a great many empty men, at a time when full men are needed as badly as at any time in the history of the world.

Whatever the answer, widespread attention ought to be focused on this charge by a group of outstanding educators that thousands of high school students do not know how to read. If they don't know how to read, they are not educated: if they aren't learning in the schools how to learn, then the taxpayers who support the schools are not getting value received for their money.

Desire for Greater Freedom and Equality Seen in American Way of Life.

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

THERE was a curious juxtaposition of headlines in the Sunday Herald Tribune. Right across the page at the top was the banner: "Willkie Says This Way of Life Will Pass It He Loses." Under it: "Japan Says She Will Help Make Over the Entire World."

"This Way of Life" is passing with extreme rapidity all over the world, and some ingredients of our way of life are certain to pass, peace or war, or whoever wins or whatever the outcome. Even if the war had never occurred, "This Way of Life" would have been profoundly modified. Indeed, the war is part of the process of modifying it, and there is no one who can imagine any means of survival that does not imply modification. Certainly Mr. Willkie cannot, for he says that democracy, to survive, must be dynamic not static, and he supports conscription in peace-time, which, in itself, means a drastic break with our traditional way of life.

Dorothy Thompson

The great internal problem in this country and all countries is, indeed, to find out just what in our way of life we want to preserve, come hell and high water, and what we are willing to change.

There is a tendency among the more prosperous native-born, middle-class groups to identify the American Way of Life with the particular system of private enterprise, big business leadership, mass consumption of highly advertised products, monopolistic merger at the top and ruthless competition elsewhere which certainly dominated American life from the beginning of the great industrial expansion after the Civil War until the great crash in 1929.

Always Challenged

But this way, and the values deriving from it, never had unchallenged sway. Rural New England looked back to many forms of co-operatic endeavor; all the Utopian dreams and Utopian experiments in which this country has been inventive, from the Oneida Community to the Mormons, had quite different customs and ideals; this Way of Life has been challenged and criticized for two generations both by the radicals and by the real conservatives, and most of all—most consistently and unanimously—it has been challenged, and without exception, by American poets and philosophers.

So what is The American Way of Life?

Actually, in surveying the past and contemplating the present, we observe that The American Way has meant very different things in different periods of history, and very different things among different sections of the population at the same time.

The American way is not the same for a Negro sharecropper on an Alabama plantation and for a Vermont farmer. The former lives in an economy which grew up as the successor to chattel slavery in a defeated and impoverished section of the country, and which we are only beginning to regard as a national problem. The latter pursues a way of life according to an almost unbroken tradition of over a hundred years.

The Way of Life of an industrial worker on an assembly belt has little relation to the Way of Life pursued by his ancestors, who carried their own tools. The Way of Life of Long Island society is not the same as the Way of Life of a Manhattan garment worker. The Way of Life among first or second generation immigrants in great cities and huge industrial centers is not the same as the Way of Life of small-town Americans who are members of the D.A.R.

Desire For Freedom, Equality

One can discern a thread that runs through everything—through progress, regression and constant change in unbroken continuity—the desire of this people for greater freedom and equality; for more real freedom in terms of education and human dignity and for equality geared upward, not downward; the conviction that this end is to be achieved through political liberty and an undaunted idealism and faith that it can be won.

In times of general prosperity the faith is likely to languish. But in danger it revives, as the most wholesome sign of the basic oneness of this so divergent people. In those times of stress and danger the leadership that knows how to play on this one unbroken string is invincible. That string

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Saturday, Oct. 4, 1930.

Three Reichswehr lieutenants were convicted in the German supreme court at Leipsig, Bavaria, on charges of attempted high treason and sentenced to 18 months in a fortress. They were accused of attempting to win the Reichswehr, or home guard, over to the movement of Adolf Hitler, Fascist party chief, through a process of building Fascist "cells" in their ranks. It was in their trial that Hitler had testified as to the aims and intentions of his party, predicted a revolution in Germany and foresaw a time to come when heads of Socialists responsible for the German political events in 1918 would "roll on the ground."

Miss Donna Miller, student nurse at Mt. Carmel hospital in Columbus, was visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Miller of Avondale avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Hummer of Silver street were visiting in New York City and other points in the east.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Monday, Oct. 4, 1920.

The Marion High school football team started its season with a 48-0 victory over Carey High school. Brashares made two touchdowns and Mewhorter, Burdette, Wiedemann, M. Hinklin, Minard and Phillians, one each.

Mrs. J. V. Wilson, new president of the Research club, entertained the club in the first meeting of the season at her home on South Prospect street.

High school teachers were voted increases in salary by the board of education.

Speaking at Spiegel grove near Fremont, at the unveiling of a memorial tablet in honor of Sandusky county soldiers who lost their lives in the Spanish-American and World wars, Senator Harding voiced a tribute to the defenders of America. Spiegel grove state park comprised largely the old Rutherford B. Hayes estate. Senator and Mrs. Harding motored to Fremont where they were luncheon guests at the home of Col. Webb Hayes, son of President Hayes. Accompanying them were George B. Christian, Jr., Senator Harding's secretary, and several automobiles carrying newspaper correspondents. The unveiling ceremony was preceded by a parade headed by the navy recruiting band from Great Lakes naval training station.

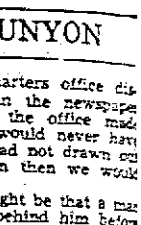
They Overdid It

All That Fuss About Our 40 Years in Newspaper Business Omitted Fact We Began at Two.

By DAMON RUNYON

SOMEBODY in our headquarters office discovered we have been in the newspaper business for 40 years, and the office made quite a to-do about it. We would never have noticed those years if they had not drawn our attention to the matter. Even then we would not have made 'em public.

You see, the assumption might be that a man must have had some years behind him before going on a job. The 40 years on the job could therefore suggest considerable age, and if there is any one thing we are sensitive about it is our age. It burns us up that in speaking of our 40 years service in the newspaper game, no one bothers to explain that we started at the age of two.



Damon Runyon

That was back in our old home town of Pueblo. Our early start was not considered anything extraordinary there. In Pueblo in those days, boys of one who were not our pegging rocks at the Chinese laundrymen were considered backward. Those who had not graduated from high school by four were viewed as complete morons. At five they voted the straight Democratic ticket. We think the youth of Pueblo matured earlier than they do nowadays.

Thus, as a newspaper reporter at two, we were no phenomenon. In fact, it was considered praiseworthy of us to want to go to work early. A few of our local boys did not begin looking for jobs until they were six, but they were mostly fellows who were just born to be loafers. Every town had that type in those days.

IT CAUSED no lifting of local brows when we went about Pueblo in our perambulator with our notebook and pencil, inquiring of all and sundry, "Well what do you know?" More than likely many persons in Pueblo will recall seeing a bartender glance toward the swinging door and hearing him mutter hastily:

"Hist! That Runyon fellow is coming in so be careful of what you say in front of him. He puts everything he hears in the paper. Little pitchers have big ears."

We were unaware of it at the time, but were afterward told that in the earlier period of our career we were a source of great embarrassment to many of the ladies of Pueblo, because we had a habit of calling on them even in the street to assist in arranging a certain quite necessary bit of the lingerie of infanthood, commonly known as a diaper.

FOR some reason, we never could quite get the hang of comfortable adjustment of this thing unassisted, and it never occurred to us that we might be overstepping the bounds of hospitality in requesting cooperation.

Then one day when we were hurrying to cover a murder, we found ourself in difficulties and summoned to our aid a well known social and civic leader who unfortunately chanced to be a maiden lady.

Well, she made an awful hooraw over our innocent request and delayed us until we got scooped on the murder. Moreover, we lost a valuable rattle on the way. Later, we wrote a scathing editorial chiding all women who had not familiarized themselves with the fundamentals of their office on earth and demanding to know what the country was coming to.

We trust that this explanation will be read far and wide and that those who hear of the 40 years will not take it for granted that we must have been issued contemporaneously with the Declaration of Independence. And that those who see us in the flesh will not think that the luxuriant silky brown hair is due to an excellent dye, or the lineless kisser to a good masseur or that the springy step and the light of youthful spirit in the kindly gray eyes comes of a recent shot in the arm.

NO, SIR, and ma'am, we just started young, that's all. Of our 40 years in the game the first 19 were the hardest. The last 30 we have spent in the service of one employer, William Randolph Hearst. We have always found him eminently satisfactory as an employer and cheerfully recommended him in that capacity to whom it may concern. We do not know how it is the other way around. But we hear rumors of a movement to award him the D. S. M. for standing for us so long.

Anecdotes of Ohio

By GILBERT F. DODDS

The Women's Christian Temperance movement enjoyed considerable influence generally throughout Ohio after its organization in 1873.

This anecdote of a Washington Court House saloon-keeper is typical of many other Ohio saloon men. Eleven days after the W. C. T. U. organization, the 11 saloons in the Fayette county seat were forced to capitulate to the songs and prayers from the religious abstainers.

However, just outside the town limits, one saloon-keeper persisted in business and a rushing trade was evident. The women concentrated their efforts upon the lone saloon-keeper. The keeper retaliated against their entering his place and singing hymns by keeping no fire in hope of freezing them out. To increase their discomfort he poured water on the floor and opened the windows.

The women threw up a shack in which they kept a stove fire, continuing their campaign. The saloon-keeper finally gave up.

Wlilkie Aids an Author

From Charleston (S. C.) News & Courier.

Unlike Gen. Hugh Johnson and some others the News and Courier does not pretend to have discovered Wendell Willkie. We have known him well eight or 10 years and we like him. We like him because he is "just one of us," and can tell a joke on himself. This one he told to a party of 16 or 18 of his friends in Charleston (there was not among them a public utility man or corporation officer).

Willkie said that he was in Atlanta about three years ago, and one of the officers of the power company there (not a principal officer) approached him shyly, diffidently, saying, "Mr. Willkie, my wife has written a story, and a publisher has accepted it. We expect to make $1,000 out of it, and, if we have luck, three or four thousand. It occurred to me that you might say a good word for it to the people in your companies and that they might push it along a little when it is published."

So Mr. Willkie, then president of the Commonwealth and Southern, when he returned to New York, sent out a letter to the officers of his various companies from Minnesota, Wisconsin to Alabama, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, Tennessee, telling them that the wife of one of their fellow workers had written a novel and that he hoped that they would say a good word for it. These letters numbered some hundred.

As it turned out, the novel was "Gone With the Wind," by Margaret Mitchell. The book paid her in a year more than is Mr. Willkie's salary in three or four years.

Mr. Willkie told us the story before he was talked of for president; it was a good joke on himself, and he does not know that we are repeating it.

No man in America is prouder of the success of Margaret Mitchell, wife of one of his "fellow workers," than is Wendell Willkie.

THOMPSON

produces a familiar and trusted music. For it is part of our destiny that we are a nation of idealists.

Now, this nation is in danger from without because—as the second headline indicates—there is a plan abroad "to make over the entire world." It is, we read, to be divided "into spheres of influence." The process of so dividing it threatens freedom and equality throughout the world. And only the limited imagination can believe that if the basic tenets of the American faith perish elsewhere in the world they will live in undiminished vitality here.

LUCK TWO-FOLD

By The United Press

TOWANDA, Pa.—Ralph Pickering doesn't need a map to unearth buried treasure. While digging a silo pit on the A. C. Pratt farm, he discovered a 15-jewel gold watch, lost 20 years ago but still in good conditon. The next day he found the fob, a souvenir of the 50th anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg.

NEW HARD-WATER SUDS WON'T "GRAY" STOCKING COLORS

Are you sick of using soap that just won't suds in this hard water? Then here's a new and different suds that bursts into mountains of rich, billowy suds in hardest water. Yes, Vel makes 5 times more suds than any soap, cup for cup, in hardest water. In fact, the harder the water the bigger the suds. You don't have to rub and soak the life out of dainty things. Just a swish in Vel's rich suds and soil and staleness vanish like magic from stockings, underwear, and all fine fabrics. Yet Vel suds make no horrid, hard-water scum to gray the fresh delicate colors of stockings and other dainty garments. That's why everything washed with Vel comes out so radiant, fresh and new looking. Buy Vel today and see why women with "hard-water blues" now sing the praises of this new suds.

FULL TEXT OF WILLKIE'S LABOR SPEECH

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct 4—Following is the text of a speech delivered by Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential candidate, at Forbes Field last night.

The city of Pittsburgh stands for American enterprise. Courage and hard work have built this city and have manufactured here the sinews of peace and war I know of no more fitting place for a man to stand up and talk—frankly and specifically—about American labor.

You workers of America—organized and unorganized—skilled and unskilled—are entitled to know in forthright language exactly where I stand—and I want you to know.

I want to begin with Abraham Lincoln He is my favorite character in American history—the gentle, merciful Lincoln — who fought until he died to preserve the basic concepts of American life

Abraham Lincoln said

"Labor is prior to and independent of capital Capital is only the fruit of labor, could never have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital, and deserves much higher consideration"

I stand with Abraham Lincoln I have earned my bread by the sweat of my brow I know as well as any man in America, the strong bond that unites those who labor

But this bond should not lead to war upon business, or upon property Because, as Lincoln also said

"Property is the fruit of labor property is desirable, is a positive good in the world * * * Let not him who is houseless pull down the house of another, but let him work diligently and build one for himself, thus by example assuring that his own will be safe when built."

LABOR ACT CALLED LONG IN MAKING

I stand for a democratic society based on the bill of rights and a system of private property —with full rights to labor

Let no man, and no party claim sole credit for the national labor relations act. It has been in the making for many years Men like the great Samuel Gompers gave their lives to its principles. This act is the result of a century of bloody struggles—of the sweat and the agony of countless unnamed workers

It was, and it is statutory recognition of a simple fact—the right of men to join together—to bargain collectively for better hours, better wages and better working conditions through representatives of their own choosing

It was long overdue

The act was passed by the congress, as the representatives of the people Its passage gave no candidate and no administration a mortgage on the workers of America No man can buy the votes of labor No true leader of labor would try to sell the free ballots of his members

For my part, I was for the national labor relations act before it was passed—I was for it after it was passed—and I am for it now

I subscribe, without reservation, to the principle of collective bargaining by representatives of labor's free choice

All men of good conscience are in agreement with me on this principle and I want the support of no others

FACTS MUST BE BASIS OF AGREEMENTS

Complete and unequivocal acceptance of the great principle of collective bargaining is, then one of the foundation stones on which my administration will be based And I will see to it that any selfish and corrupt forces that oppose collective bargaining will have the hard hand of the government against them

However labor agreements have two parties—the employer and the workers With increased rights to labor go increased responsibilities There must be genuine and persistent effort to reach agreements on the basis of facts, not force And once reached those agreements must be kept by both parties

In such agreements entered into by free men on the basis of facts and in good faith let us find the foundation for the great America we want to build—the new America—an America big enough for all of us

Now I will tell you why I think the present administration has let labor down It has let labor down because it has failed to make jobs

It is honest and proper to say here that when the New Deal first took office we all had great hopes for it. I, for one, had those hopes and I voted for those hopes

But all our hopes have been dashed on the rock of unemployment. In seven years the New Deal has been unable to lick the problem of jobs Today there are 9,600 000 persons out of work And that's a quarter million more men than were out of work four years ago, when the third-term candidate was running for his second term

NEW DEAL TAKES SITUATION FOR GRANTED

The New Dealers have come to think of unemployment as the normal way of things To them the 9,600,000 unemployed have become a statistic But his isn't a statistic It's a tragedy it's a personal tragedy for men who once did useful work who are now desperately looking for jobs—productive jobs at decent standards It's a personal tragedy for millions of young men and women —and for a half a million new ones every year—who have never had a steady job and whose lives are being warped by the shame of that fact It is a personal tragedy for those of 50 years or more, who have many years of good active life ahead of them and are desperately hoping for one more chance to catch on before it is too late

And this is my pledge This is my pledge to American labor I will make real jobs for those who now seek them so desperately I will give those elderly men the one more chance they are looking for And for those young people I will make this America of ours once more a land of opportunity

On Jan. 20, 1937, the candidate for a third term said, on entering office for the second time "I see one-third of a nation ill-fed ill-housed, ill-clad, and ill-nourished.

Well, what has been done about it? What has been done except to keep them ill-fed ill-housed ill-clad and ill-nourished?

You might ask What can Wendell Willkie do about it? We're stopped growing We have a static economy We're going backward

That's just what the New Deal believes That's just what it's been preaching And that's just why it can't make any jobs

DECLARES PRODUCTION WILL MAKE JOBS

In order to make jobs people have to believe in the future They have to see America the way it really is a young country hungry for more goods more food, more comfort more work That's what America is That's your America and my America

But in order to have that kind of America, conditions must be such that men are eager to get into business and start new enterprises That means more jobs More jobs mean more buying power and more consumption More consumption means more production—and again more jobs

In Seattle on Sept. 23 I went into the question of how to make jobs for the people of America, and I talked about it at some length

Production increased production by business, big and little makes jobs

The New Deal has discouraged business—little business far more than big business—until today we are short—here in America—about 700,000 new enterprises I am in favor of getting those 700-000 new enterprises started and I will get them started

I am in favor of encouraging business—not because it is business—not because of profits as such but because I know that such encouragement will put 9-600 000 men back to work

I am for proper regulation of business particularly big business but I am for having those regulations as simple as possible as efficient as possible Labor should be for that—and I think it is

Next to the objective of making our defenses strong—a major vital problem that this administration has failed—and is still failing to solve—the biggest single American objective is to re establish our expanding life our dynamic life

GOOD RELATIONS ESSENTIAL NEED

To start that new expansion we need new enterprises But what else do we need?

Why, we need good relations We must have good relations between government and industry good relations between government and labor—and above all good relations between labor and industry

What is the role of labor in an expanding economy? It is the role of a partner in a free enterprise

The American worker expects a chance to negotiate his terms of employment with business That is right—and I am for it In my administration I shall encourage collective bargaining as an essential part of the new American way of life

It is only superficially that collective bargaining is a means of adjusting differences. More fundamentally, collective bargaining is a way of working together —labor and capital—to advance their common their mutual and their joint interest — a higher standard of living for the American people

I have said that it is the duty of the government to protect labor and the right to bargain collectively But it does labor no good to have the right of collective bargaining about a job that it doesn't have You and I know that you can't bargain collectively about nothing

But the administration of the act is another thing Its administration has been condemned by employer and labor alike The maladministration of this act has been—and it is—one of the most shocking tragedies in the history of American industrial relations The trouble lies in the main, not with the act, but with its administration

NLRB JOB IS TO PROMOTE HARMONY

It would therefore seem to me wise before materially changing the act as many suggest to change the administration of it This would require some special legislation but that problem is not insuperable If a wiser administration of the act does not produce the results that we all want—good relations between labor and industry—then changes would be in order

This is an extremely important problem It calls for wise and deliberate action We must be careful not to sacrifice by hasty action, the gains already made

First, and last we must understand that the real job of the national labor relations board is much more than the settlement of the 10 000 cases that come before it every year Its real job is to create a better understanding of the possibilities inherent in collective bargaining Its real job is to help people to work together, to strengthen—not to disrupt—the basic partnership of industry If our democracy is to become strong the men who do the work and the men who take the risks must be meshed together around a table

When I am elected that is what an efficient labor board will do

And now I want to make a few other points

First, the healthy spread of collective bargaining makes it more important than ever that the government be prepared to offer a high-grade conciliation service when industrial disputes threaten The existing conciliation service must be strengthened and improved and its work should be integrated with the work of the labor board

FAIR WAGES, FAIR HOURS HIS PLEDGE

Second there should be some decentralization of federal government activities in the labor field because each locality knows its own problems

Third the states should be encouraged to strengthen and improve their own procedures for the settlement of labor disputes

Fourth—and I say this especially to those millions of Americans who are not members of any labor union—I give my solemn word that fair minimum wages, below which no employer can go, will be established and the law enforced both north and south

And by fair minimum wages I mean just this—that as our economy expands as our resources are developed as our new industries get under way, I shall expect to see to it that our wage structures rise with the growth accomplished so that the standard of living of all will rise with our increased production

I hate starvation wages I hate the sweat shops I despise any man who profits unjustly by those who labor Against such a man I will wield the big stick of Theodore Roosevelt

Fifth I stand for maximum hour legislation And by that I mean that a limit a ceiling should be put on the hours a man or woman may work, a fair day's work for a fair day's pay

Sixth, I believe in social security and I believe it should be extended to those who do not now enjoy it But I warn you that there is no security in bankruptcy Your social security does you no good—absolutely no good —if you are paying it into a government that will not at the rate it is spending, be able to pay you back.

WOULD CALL LABOR TO COUNCIL TABLE

Seventh I will tie labor into the councils of our government For too long it has been excluded from the council table—for too long it has been treated as a group apart.

In Omaha last week, I told the farmers that if I am elected president, I will convene a White House conference of all our great groups—farm, factory, labor and consumer—to tackle the job of ending economic stagnation and of preventing a common disaster

That conference will be the first practical step in giving labor a voice in the formation of national policy The economic future of our country demands that this should be done

Besides these specific pledges I have two suggestions to make

I think it would be very helpful to labor's cause and to the recovery of America if labor and management could incorporate into their contracts of their own volition provision for a cooling-off period a delay before using their economic weapons Where the principles of collective bargaining are really understood and really accepted by both parties, this would seem to me to be feasible And surely it would help us to avoid much of the misunderstanding that has in the past been so costly

Secondly, as I would have you freed from coercion by unscrupulous employers so must you be freed from the control of any crooked racketeers who have found their way into the labor movement

This is essentially a matter for labor itself to settle within its own ranks But whether in office or out of it you will find me relentlessly opposed to those selfish or criminal leaders who double-cross or exploit their own membership Those must be eliminated from all groups in America—including labor If they are not eliminated we can not have—in the progressive dynamic days to come—the honest efficient leadership necessary to fulfil the destiny of the American people

DEPLORES EXPLOITATION OF LABOR

I am against exploitation of any of you—in any manner, shape or form—and regardless of whether you are organized or unorganized, skilled or unskilled

I want a free strong labor, earning a decent wage, working fair hours under the right kind of working conditions—labor free and strong—taking its equal place, and standing shoulder to shoulder with agriculture and business to solve the problems of America—in the American way

As briefly and as frankly as I can put it that is my labor program I stand for the protection of labor's rights. But I stand for more than protection I stand for jobs I stand for free labor free to bargain and free to work

But now candor compels me to discuss another phase of labor The great civil war within the ranks of labor is a source of sorrow and worry to the whole American people No one, and least of all labor can profit from it. In fact, I want to quote Abraham Lincoln again

"The strongest bond of human sympathy," Lincoln said "outside of the family relations, should be one uniting all working people, of all nations and tongues and kindreds Let them beware of prejudice, working division, and hostility among themselves."

His sentiments are my sentiments, and his views are my views. I shall not, as the third term candidate did do things that cause you to be divided"

PLEDGES EFFORTS TO BENEFIT LABOR

I will, on the contrary, use the high office of president to the best of my ability to bring labor together I stand for a united labor movement—just as I am for a united American people A house divided against itself cannot stand.

A divided labor movement is the natural prey of unscrupulous politicians, who play one group against the other to serve their own selfish purposes.

A united labor movement is the strongest defense the democratic process can have It is a fortress standing against autocracy bureaucracy, and the dictatorship which threatens us. It is a crusade for the improvement of the lot of the common man It gives aid and comfort to the millions within its brotherhood

When I am elected I will appoint as secretary of labor an outstanding man an actual representative of labor

The job of secretary of labor is a man's job

And the first job of my secretary will be to bring about cooperation within labor itself to bring peace and strength to the ranks of labor, to help labor with all the means at his command, and to educate labor and employer alike to the true meaning of collective bargaining

And also when I am elected president, I will immediately clear out from the federal government all Communists and their fellow-travelers.

CALLS FOR HELP IN FIGHT FOR JOBS

Mr Earl Browder will have no occasion—or wish—to recommend me for a third term

And so I call upon all of the workers of America, all of the people of America to join me in the good fight—the fight for jobs —the fight for production—the fight to unite America

I have gone up and down America preaching the gospel of progress preaching the desperate need for unity in our people I have told men and women everywhere that the monstrous doctrine of class against class must be put down Affirmatively, I say to you that the forces of America — farmer business, and worker—must be geared to work together

Ours is the task to put to work the free institutions of free men in free America to give the lie to the strutting bullies of Europe with their doctrines of supermen slave classes and subject races.

I propose a triumvirate of labor agriculture and business—one for all and all for one That triumvirate will work together Each will see the other's problems Each will sacrifice a little for the other Each will work toward the other's gain And then then I know that there is nothing that can stop this wonderful America this great dynamic giant. Nothing can stop us then from bursting through our present doubt and discouragement into a world of new hope and new horizons

Upper Sandusky Officer Uses Gas Bomb on Burglars

Special to The Star

UPPER SANDUSKY, O., Oct. 4 —Discovered by Upper Sandusky's only night policeman, a pair of burglars who broke into the Bow and Arrow tavern early today escaped under a tear gas barrage laid down by the officer. Police said they abandoned a stolen car at the tavern and later took another car in which they completed their escape.

Policeman Harold Knapp said he discovered the men in the tavern while cruising through the east section of the city about 6 a. m. and since there were no other officers on duty attempted to capture the men single-handed. He fired a tear gas shell through a window broken out by the burglars in an attempt to drive the men through the front door of the tavern. A moment later a passing motorist stopped and volunteered his services but by this time the men had fled through an unguarded door at the rear of the tavern, Knapp said.

However, the men were unable to reach the stolen car parked in front of the tavern and later stole a car from a garage at the Ernest Stansberry home three blocks from the tavern, police reported. The abandoned car, which was stolen from Toledo yesterday, was claimed by the owner today. Police said that at least a half-dozen parked cars in the vicinity of the tavern had been tampered with, apparently as the burglars were attempting to escape.

Officers reported apparently nothing was taken at the tavern except possibly a few packages of cigarets.

Cong. Smith Urges Federal Economy in Radio Address

Present Practices Headed for Bankruptcy, Marion Representative Says in Talk from Washington.

Billions of dollars could be saved "without doing the least harm to government functions," Eighth District Congressman Frederick C. Smith of Marion told a nationwide MBS radio audience Thursday night.

Declaring that with the nation undertaking a vast defense program "there never was a time when our country was in greater need of careful watching of our national finances," he urged a halt of "waste."

After non-essentials are cut out, the country should levy enough taxes to meet all costs, he proposed.

"Bankruptcy is one of the greatest disasters that can befall any people," the Marion congressman charged. "This was the primary cause of Russia's breakdown in the World war, and therefore the Communism that overtook it. Insolvency of government treasuries was one of the principal causes of the hell that is sweeping over Europe today."

Urges Action

The United States must act quickly to avoid a similar fate, he declared, urging people in all walks of life to organize groups to meet the threat of national bankruptcy. He urged his listeners to write him for any assistance.

"It appears we are involved in a most vicious process" he declared, "a weakened treasury, yet the need of imposing additional large sums for defense, which in turn weakens the treasury still further. In this way our first line of defense is being continually undermined."

Before the World war the federal debt, he said, was less than 1¼ billions. The war boosted it to 25½ billions, from where it climbed and reached the high figure of 42 billions in 1940. This would buy all the property in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, he said.

Cites Huge Expenditures

By comparison, the total cost of running the federal government from its founding through 1930, 141 years, was about 100 billions. But from 1930 to 1940, all peacetime, congress has spent, appropriated and authorized to be spent more than 90 billions, he charged.

"We all wish to do everything to strengthen defense," Dr. Smith said. "We should appropriate every dollar that is necessary for this purpose, but that does not indicate that we should be the least uneconomical in spending this money. Certainly we should try to make every dollar go as far as possible. Above all the congress should do something to eliminate the enormous waste that is taking place."

Cong. Smith set at $6,500,000,000 the annual cost of maintaining the nation's armed forces.

Dr. Smith's talk originated in the studios of station WOL in Washington, D. C., and was heard from 11:15 to 11:30 p. m.

AWARDED PRIVATE PILOT'S LICENSE

Dale Hughes Passes Federal Tests at Columbus.

Dale Hughes, Marion photographer and aviation enthusiast, was granted a private pilot's license Thursday at Columbus, after passing intensive written and flight examinations lasting several hours.

His new license will permit him to fly any place American planes are now permitted and to take up passengers, but not for hire. His former license contained several restrictions not in the private license.

The written examination began at about 10 a. m. and lasted until 1:30, covering a wide range of subjects, including airplane theory, meteorology, navigation and the like. The flight test lasted about an hour and a half and involved performance of various maneuvers demonstrating the pilot's skill. Mr. Hughes used his own plane.

The inspector was Frank Estill of Cincinnati, representing the civil aeronautics bureau. An assistant also aided in the tests.

Reunion Plans Recall Stories of Heyde School

Reminiscences by former teachers will be a highlight of the program at the annual reunion Sunday of the old Heyde school at St. [illegible] church parish house on the Richland road.

The program, which will follow a basket dinner at 12 noon, will get under way in the afternoon. It will include selections by a 10-piece band directed by Albert [illegible], piano selections by Mrs. Cora [illegible], a group singing led by Ola Lanius, group singing led by Harold Pasmore, "God Bless America" sung by Donna Ruth [illegible], secretary, and the pledge of allegiance.

Arrangements for the program were made by a committee composed of Mrs. D. E. Montgomery, chairman; Mrs. Truman Owen, Mrs. Welcome Knickle, Mrs. Lawrence Retterer, Ralph Hensel and William Dietsch.

Teachers, former pupils, their families and friends have been invited to join in the reunion.

Heyde school, known to older residents as "Dogtown school," and later designated Maple Grove school, still stands on Route 98 the Columbus-Sandusky road, but is no longer in use. Boys and girls of the community now attend the Claridon school.

Originally Log School

The first Heyde school was a log structure, built probably in the '60's, and is now used as an animal shelter on a farm across the highway from the present Heyde school, a brick building erected in 1880. Where the name "Dogtown School" originated is unknown.

The land on which the school stands is on the farm of the late Gerave Heyde, a native of Castle, Hessen, Germany, who came to the United States in the early '60's. His youngest daughter, Mary, is the wife of Virgil Dye, manager of Hotel Harding. Welcome W. Knickle now owns the farm.

Aside from farming, the pioneer Heyde packed and shipped eggs and poultry to city markets and operated a small country grocery store where notions, cigars, tobacco, candy and staple foods were sold. His store enjoyed the patronage of virtually everyone in the community and his farm and its buildings was considered among the best-equipped and managed in eastern Marion county. The store was in a building slightly larger than a modern home garage. There were two steps up to the entrance door.

The present Heyde school was considered unusually fine for its day. At the north end inside the entrance were hooks for the girls' wraps and a large corner cupboard for the lunch boxes. At the other end was a similar arrangement for the boys. The teacher's desk stood on a platform. The "blackboard" across one side of the room was created by painting the plastering black. Chipping of the plastering created "blackboard" troubles from time to time, former teachers recall.

Former Teachers

Among the many former teachers still living are Miss Etta Jacoby of South State street who retired in June after 20 years as librarian at Harding High school; Miss Grace Cunningham of Mt. Vernon avenue, retired public school teacher who is now secretary-treasurer of the Heyde school alumni group; Mrs. Ralph Gabler of Waldo, the former Miss Stella Selanders, mother of Cecil Gabler who is principal of Vernon Heights Junior High school; Miss Isabelle Freeland who is teaching in the Lakewood, O., schools; Mrs. Katie Watson of the Glenwood school faculty, the former Miss Katie Goerlich; Mrs. W. W. Knickle, the former Miss Irene Oborn, who was the last teacher in the school and is now living on the old Heyde farm; Mrs. Ola Lanius of the Pleasant Township school faculty, formerly Miss Ola Reynolds; Mrs. Addison Redd of 755 South Prospect street, the former Miss Dora Freeman; Mrs. George Epley of the Edison road, the former Miss Mary Seigler, and Mrs. M. G. Smith of 462 South Prospect street, the former Miss Alice Emery.

The late Judge George B. Scofield was the second teacher at the school. The first teacher was C. L. Bader, who died some time ago in Indiana.

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, Oct. 5

ACCORDING to the lunar aspects this should be a very lively day with things of major consequence stirring in connection with groups, public or fraternal or humanitarian projects. Some rather drastic or seemingly ruthless action may be required to launch such promotions on a safe and enduring basis, as they may have profound and far reaching consequences involving the public welfare. In these efforts confer with superiors or those in authority, for they will be in approachable mood.

Those whose birthday it is are to have a year of major importance, with much very decisive activity in the cause of public welfare, either of a political, diplomatic, spiritual or humanitarian purpose. Such aims and ends will be best promoted by the endorsement and practical support of those in power and authority. Seek this with confidence and sound plans.

A child born on this day may have much capacity for public work, with sympathy, understanding and insight into reforms, social and humane needs, general public well-being.

Norway has prohibited the importation and domestic manufacture of gas generators using charcoal or wood fuel for the propulsion of motor vehicles unless their design has been approved by a government department.

Woman Employe of State Not Only Baseball Fan, but Good Scorekeeper

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O. — When sunburned, 64-year-old Mrs. Lucy Caldwell tells you she'd rather keep ball scores than eat, she means it.

During baseball season, Lucy, a claims examiner in the Ohio industrial commission, grabs part of her supper at the office from a big white leather handbag hurries to the ball park, and then gets the rest of her meal from the refrigerator at home after the game.

Ever since she "showed up" her two brothers playing "roundies" as a tomboy of 10 and begged her dad to take her to old Brisbane park to watch Atlanta's Southern Association home games, Lucy has loved baseball.

Twenty-four years ago the industrial commission organized a ball club and needed a scorekeeper. "Aw, you don't know nothin' about keepin' score," they told Lucy, a new employe when she volunteered. But they let her try it at a practice game, and she's kept the ball books ever since.

Keeps Old Score Books

At home, she said, she has a stack of score books two feet high accumulated in more than a quarter century. Some weeks she has scored as many as six games and she's averaged about three.

Currently she is official scorekeeper for the commission softball team and the state office building elevator boys' team. She's given up a Saturday afternoon hardball league so that some jobless youngsters can have the earnings.

For seven years Lucy wrote a sports column for a Columbus newspaper, but now her typewriter pecks out only bulletin board stories to be read by a few of the 600 industrial commission employes. To a detailed box score, she appends a news summary in the best baseball jargon telling how a star fielder pulled down three cloud chasers, etc.

A loyal supporter of the Columbus American Association Redbirds, Lucy postponed her vacation till spring so she can visit her brother in Hollywood, Fla., while the Redbirds are training there.

Gallery of Stars

Under the glasstop of her desk across which she is checking doctor's fees and signatures on her third million of injured workmen's pink claim sheets, Lucy has a collection of big league players' photographs. Covering pillars on either side of her desk and spreading across it in a desktop gallery are pictures of old time ball players, sports writers and radio commentators.

Always the individualist, Mrs. Caldwell at 28 picked her husband from Dun and Bradstreet—his surname was the same as hers, and he lived at Caldwell, O. They corresponded for six months and were married atop Lookout mountain 10 days after their first meeting in Atlanta, Ga.

Now widowed, she's taking night courses at Ohio State university in French, English vocabulary and movie reviewing. Her particular pride is a tiny granddaughter who, Mrs. Caldwell said, "can throw a baseball like a man."

By ADELE GARRISON

Whatever the Fears Which Had Gripped Veritzen They Are Gone After His Interview with the Chief

PERHAPS the interview with Father won't be as devastating to Phil as you fear," I told Lillian, but without conviction, for the remembrance of the great impassive haggard face and pressed lines as he went into my mother's room had made me certain that he faced something so dreadful as to spell the ruin of all his hopes.

"There's your answer, I fancy," Lillian commented dryly as the house telephone tinkled, and when I had answered its summons, my father's voice, low, but insistent, came to mye ars.

"Margaret?" he queried, and when I had answered in the affirmative, he gave me a crisp direction couched in language which made me understand Philip Veritzen could hear him.

"Mr. Veritzen is leaving my room now," he said. "Will you please meet him in the hall and show him where he is to sleep? Will you also see Queen Olga, and ask her if she can give him an interview with her shortly. Incidentally, will you please tell the queen that I am lifting the ban I laid upon her a little while ago. Do you understand me? If so, please give me your interpretation of what I have said, but be careful your voice does not carry."

News of the Emeralds

His caution was superfluous, I told myself grimly. My voice was so tremulous with excitement that I knew he must have difficulty in hearing it.

"Do you mean that she may tell Phil about the recovery of the emeralds?"

"Exactly that," he said, "and in a few minutes I want them both to come back to this room, you, perhaps, can conjecture why."

"So that she may show them to him?" I quavered.

"Yes, thank you. Good-bye."

The clicks of the receivers were simultaneous, and I whirled to face Lillian with eyes that I knew must be wide with astonishment.

"Did you hear?" I demanded.

"Enough to 'dee-dooce' a la Katie, that Phil must have beaten his rap whatever it was," she replied dryly. "But may I remind you that the great man is even now moseying down the hall, in search of sanctuary, and—"

"And I already am meeting him," I answered, going into the hall, and finding my former employer almost opposite the door.

"Ah my dear!" he said as he saw me, and his voice had its old resonant timbre, so sadly lacking in it before he had faced my father. "Your father tells me you will show me where to put my belongings, and, more important still, will ask—Olga when she can see me."

His stammering omission of his fiancee's royal title, gave me a bit of satisfied amusement. Perhaps, I told myself, he was beginning to have what Lillian would call a "glimmering" of common sense in his attitude toward his future wife. If this were were true, I reflected, his chances for happiness — and Olga's — would be greatly enhanced. No wife could keep up the-leaning-from-a-throne-to-raise-a-kneeling-adorer-attitude which was what Philip Veritzen evidently had expected from his royal fiancee.

A Changed Man

But, of course, I permitted no betrayal of my mental comment in my voice. I also ignored the remarkable change which had been effected in his face and manner during his interview with my father, and answered him with the casual courtesy which the occasion demanded.

"It is only a few steps to your room," I told him. "Just come with me."

But when I had reached my door, he drew back.

"This is your room!" he exclaimed. "I cannot possibly take this from you."

"It hasn't been my room for days," I said a bit testily. "Miss Fairfax and her nurse have been occupying it, and I have been bunking with Lillian. But, as I told you, we transferred them to my study a little while ago, and the room, empty and cleared of belongings, is at your service. If you will just make yourself at home in it, I will tell Otto to bring up your belongings and make you comfortable, and then —shall I tell Olga you would like to see her?"

Series Takes on New Complexion as Revived Reds Square Things Up

Scribes Who Picked Cincinnati To Take Tigers Feel Much Better.

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer

DETROIT, Oct. 4—A few well-spaced smacks by Cincinnati's batters and one beautifully pitched game by Bucky Walters had changed the entire complexion of the 1940 World Series as the reviving Reds tackled the Detroit Tigers in the third struggle of the autumn series at Briggs stadium today.

Before yesterday's game, anybody who would have offered a dime for the Reds' chances must either have been psychic or an incurable sentimentalist. The National league champions had looked plain terrible as they lost the opening game at Cincinnati, 7 to 2, and they were the first to admit it.

Today they had to be accounted almost a new ball club. They finally had crashed through and won a World Series game, 5 to 3. Bill McKechnie's boys, who have felt for two years that they were a fine ball club, were riding the crest of victory and confident that they were on the brink of showing the American leaguers a thing or two.

All Pepped Up

It was a brand-new series, as full of fight as a mountain bobcat and packed with potential thrills. The Reds, after losing four straight to the Yankees last fall and another to the Tigers Wednesday, at last had got on the winning track and were out to do no good. A majority of the country's baseball writers who crammed a special train from Cincinnati last night were feeling much better about their original hunch that the Reds were due to win.

There was some substance to their feeling, since Walters had won his game and the Reds had knocked Schoolboy Rowe, Detroit's second-best pitcher, from the hill. The Reds appeared to be in vastly better shape for pitching.

The Reds, had a couple of strong winning pitchers to try to follow the example set by Walters yesterday. It either would be "Milkman" Jim Turner or Junior Thompson, either of whom would be a welcome addition to the Detroit staff at this juncture. And after this pair the Reds could come right back with Paul Derringer, who was knocked from the hill in the opening game, somewhat inexplicably.

Turner, like Bridges, owns to 34 years. He was the National league's leading "rookie" when he joined the Boston Bees in 1937. Some of his intimates, however, swear that Jim was holding the gang plank in place when Pershing said: "Lafayette, we are here."

Just A Youngster

Thompson is one of the National league's most brilliant pitchers and ordinarily third member of the Cincinnati staff. It was thought, pre-series, that he would face the Tigers in the third game. But Manager Bill McKechnie was struck by the manner in which Mel Harder, a Cleveland old-timer, set down the tearing Tigers in a late, unimportant game last week. He thought he detected a sneaking resemblance between Harder and his own man Turner, who is a crafty son-of-a-gun, himself.

The Detroiters, whose spokesman was the almost Silent Del Baker, had Hank Greenberg and Rudy York, who are bad when they stand up there swinging the polished oak. Cincinnati had the pitching edge. That made it fairly even. It looked like a seven-gamer.

An individual hero? Outside Bucky Walters, who limited Detroit to three hits yesterday, that probably would be Jimmy Ripple.

He is a somewhat corpulent young gent, who was sent kiting first by the New York Giants and then by the Brooklyn Dodgers. Neither team considered him a big leaguer. Yesterday he came up, an unbeknownst, and slapped a fine left-handed home run into the far distant right field stands with a mate on base. That was the Reds' winning margin. He looked off-hand, like a good man to have around.

Will Compete in Two-Day 500-Mile Run.

Six members of the Triangle Motorcycle Club of Marion will be among the 100 entrants expected to wheel away from the starting post tomorrow when the leading motorcycle riders of United States leave from Columbus for a 500-mile national championship endurance run of the American Motorcycle association. They are Glen Dane Jr., Roy Russell and Charles Dudley, all of Marion, Al Martin of Kenton, Lewis Atkinson of Columbus and Edward Snyder of near Galion.

One woman is listed among the 100 entrants. She is Mrs. Earl Robinson of Detroit, Mich. Last month she won in the sidecar class at the 500-mile run at Lansing, Mich., and is considered among one of the leading contenders in the 1040 national trials. The 500-mile run will start in uptown Columbus at 6 a. m. Saturday and finish at the same spot late Sunday night.

Cyclists will cover 250 miles over each of two days, making a stop-over at Portsmouth, Saturday night. A banquet and party has been arranged at Portsmouth by The Sunday Star, sponsor of the event. Trophies and cash awards will be made to the winners. The course winds through forgotten trails and old wagon roads of southern Ohio.

EAGLES TO PRACTICE

The Maron Engles will hold a practice session Saturday at 12:30 at Lincoln park.

Four 'Grunt and Groan' Vets Paired for Monday Mat Bill

Knutson To Meet Hall, Lott and Nichols Booked in 90-Minute Bouts.

Junior heavyweight grapplers will pair off in the double main-event card scheduled by local promoters as Monday night's offering on the mat program at the Marion Steam Shovel arena.

Pairings of the quartet, all veterans, are:

Gil Knutson of Canada vs. Stacey Hall of Columbus.

Jimmy Lott of Birmingham, Ala., vs. Jackie Nichols of Tampa, Fla.

Both bouts have been set for 90 minutes, two falls deciding the winner.

Knutson and Hall appeared here last week. The Canadian, after facing what seemed like certain annihilation at the hands of the Great Mephisto, staged a gallant comeback that had fans cheering him to the rafters. He lost the first round but evened the score and earned a draw against his rough foe.

Hall Shows Class

Hall looked better than at any time in recent months in handing Dick Trout of Los Angeles, a complete lacing. He used only 12 minutes to get a fatal cradle hold on the Californian, proving even to the doubting Thomas's that he's completely recovered from a knee injury which sent him into temporary retirement.

Both Hall and Knutson weigh around 190 pounds. They're equally as fast inside the strands and both are adept at punishing arm grips. Unless some spark touches off a barrage of rough stuff you can be fairly certain both will rely on straight, fast grappling in their search for victory.

The return of Jackie Nichols should be an announcement welcomed by many fans. He is remembered as the "chin-spin" artist, who's trimmed a good many veterans in his long career. Though the "spin" is his favorite method of stopping his foes he's front ranking leg wrestler, meaning that he does considerable offensive and defensive work with a pair of sturdy pins.

Meets Strong Foe

Nichols meets a tough customer in Jimmy Lott. The man from 'Bama is one who won't taken no for an answer and can be depended on to stay in the scrapping to the final bell. He's visited here frequently and fans ordinarily choose to see him tamed, probably because they dislike him for over-aggressiveness.

Still to be booked for the Monday show is the curtain-raising 20-minute prelim. Promoters hope to sign a pair of light heavies for the opener.

DETROIT RACER ENTERS SUNDAY AUTO EVENTS

Elbert Booker of Detroit, Mich., will be an added starter in the field of 30 drivers expected here for Sunday's automobile racing program at the county fairgrouds, Promoter Owen Granger of Albion, Mich., reported today.

Booker yesterday wired his acceptance of an invitation to compete in the dirt track competition here, Granger said. The Detroiter is rated one of the ranking dirt track drivers and just last month won the Central Racing association classic at Greenville, O., according to Granger.

Sunday's racing will start with time trials at 11 a. m. The first of four elimination heats will begin at 2:30 p. m., to be climaxed with a final 30-lap event for those finishing first, second and third in the earlier heats.

President's Primed for NCO Opener Tonight

"Dress rehearsals" were on the menu yesterday for Marion scholastic grid teams as they prepared for important football contests scheduled this afternoon and tonight.

Coach Bernard Berens led his St. Mary crew on a visit to Forest this afternoon.

Coach Bill Williams and the Harding High outfit were awaiting the 8 p. m. kick-off whistle at Harding stadium to lock horns with Ashland, the first North Central Ohio conference foe.

The Presidents had a nocturnal signal drill last night, followed by a pep rally at the Palace theater. Harding's band, members of the student body, the team and coaching staff, participated in the mass celebration.

The enthusiasm was marred only by Coach Williams' announcement that a shoulder injury will keep Warren Ferguson, ace backfield artist, benched during tonight's encounter. Ferguson may, the mentor said, get in for several plays but it is doubtful if he can withstand the punishment of more than a short workout.

To Howard Hodges, the small but sturdily built amateur leather-slinger will go the assignment of filling the gap left by Ferguson's absence. Should Williams give him the starting assignment it will be the first time in his scholastic career that he has been on deck when the team takes the field, although he has always shown up well while performing as a replacement.

Small Crowds Cut Down Series "Bonus"

By FAITZ HOWELL
Associated Press Sports Writer

CINCINNATI, Oct. 4 — Unless attendance picks up a bit at Detroit today in the third game of the World Series, the principal actors in the big baseball classic are liable to get a slight slash in cash.

With the two openers at Cincinnati out of the way, attendance and receipts are a country mile behind the 1939 figures set in the Yankee-Red event which ended in a 4-0 rout for the Gothamites.

The first two games at Yankee stadium last year attracted 118,332 paying customers, the cash registers ringing to the cheery tune of $445,058. This year, in the limited-capacity Cincinnati park, the two tilts drew only 62,443 fans, and receipts of $292,542.10.

The players' pool last year, with the New York contests out of the way, totalled $226,979.58, while this year's two-game cash for the all-star cast was only $149,196.47—a slight difference of $77,783.11, which "ain't hay."

The players cash in on only the first four games, so the Detroit fans had better flock into the stadium today and tomorrow if they want the boys to get the right kind of a bonus for their good work this season.

Runners-Up Suffer

Of course, the Tigers and the Reds aren't the only ones who will go hungry this winter if the ante isn't "upped," for the net three clubs in each loop cut a slice out of the World Series coin.

And that fund, which for the first two scraps last year soared to $151,319.72, is down to $99,464.32 this season. Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who took about 90 players away from the Tiger chain this year and then sat back to watch them take the American loop bunting, also comes in for a slash, on present returns. The judge, who derived $66,758.70 from the first two 1939 games, has only $43,880.31 coming from the Cincinnati set.

Versatile Guys

It looks like these baseball players could make up their minds where they can do the best job, but it seems they can't. Take Bucky Walters, the Cincinnati Red pitching ace, and John Joseph Perry Gorsica, the 23-year-old Detroit right-hander.

Bucky started out as a third sacker (and a pretty good one, too) with the Phillies, but Jimmy Wilson, then skipper of the Philadelphia club, talked him into taking a fling at flinging. Bucky did it, and was the National loop's most valuable player last season, won 22 and lost 10 this year, and pitched and batted the Reds right back into the World Series yesterday with a three-hitter against the Tigers and a neat double and a run for himself.

Gorsica, who started baseballing as a career but three years ago, was a first baseman when he joined the Beckley, W. Va., farm of the Tigers in 1937. Someone talked him into taking a turn on the mound, and he liked it. He became a hurler, and yesterday, after winning seven and losing seven in his first year in the majors, he turned the Reds back with a lone hit in four and two-thirds frames, after the Cincinnatians had rocked the Tiger ace, Schoolboy Rowe, for eight bingles and five runs in three and one-third stanzas. The kid got 14 of the 15 men who faced him, Wilson's scratch hit to third sacker Mike Higgins being the only thing that looked like a solid blow.

Today it looked like Jim Turner, the Reds' big-eating pitching star, against Tommy Bridges, Detroit's curve ball artist. Each is 34 years old, so it's a battle of veterans. The only difference is that Turner spent 14 years in the minors before hitting the big time with Boston in 1937, while Bridges has been a major leaguer since 1930. Bridges has three World Series wins against no defeats, while Turner has a 0-0 record in the big classic.

SOX BEAT CUBS, 11-5

CHICAGO, Oct. 4—It was up to Bill Lee today to get the Cubs back into the running as the Chicago city series reached the fourth round with the White Sox a game up on their National league rivals, Manager Jimmy Dykes assigned John Rigney to the mound for the White Sox, who gained a 2 to 1 advantage in games by hammering the Cubs for a 11 to 5 victory.

WHEAT DOWN AS FLOUR DEMAND LAGS

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 4 — Lagging domestic flour demand and restricted world export trade helped to encourage additional profit taking in the wheat pit today and prices slipped off about a cent a bushel.

The decline here was associated with easiness of securities. Helping to encourage rallies at times was disclosure that although prices have advanced to above loan levels the rate at which wheat is being put up as collateral has been accelerated.

Wheat closed ½-⅞ lower than yesterday, Dec. 81¼-¾, May 80¾-⅞; corn ¼-½ higher, Dec. 57⅝, May 59¼; oats unchanged to ⅛ off.

Good commercial demand and scarcity of offerings helped to strengthen corn.

Boston Wool

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, Oct. 4—Fine wools were not moving as rapidly today as earlier in the week, largely because of diminished offerings at prevailing prices. Prices, however, were very firm. Good French combing length fine territory wools in original bags were bringing around 95 cents, scoured basis. Medium fineces were selling readily at 43-44 cents, in the grease, for graded combing bright three-eighths and quarter blood grades.

CANINE BABY RESCUER.

By International News Service

SCRANTON, Pa. — A canine baby rescuer is "Chief E," 18-month-old mascot of Olyphant Hose Company No. 2. "Chief E" has been trained by his master, Andrew Chotnicky, to climb a fireladder, grasp a doll gently in his mouth, and pick his way down again—head first.

The child will be amused for hours and probably you will find the kitten curled up at the foot of the bed when nap time comes around. Puppies are also helpful in amusing youngsters, but they are more strenuous than kittens.
